

18 September 2017

Italia Oggi

Giovanni Carrara joins Banor SIM as a partner

Banor SIM, one of Italy's leading independent investment firms specialising in capital management and advisory services for high net worth clients, has announced that Giovanni Carrara will be joining the firm at partner level. Formerly the head of private banking and CEO of Credit Suisse Italy S.p.A., Carrara will be responsible for high net worth clients and will have an operational role in the Family Office.

Giovanni Carrara, originally from Genoa, has been working in the Milanese market for over 30 years. After graduating in economics and business, he began his career with Arthur Andersen and then moved on to Deutsche Bank, where from 2001 to 2006 he was managing director and chief operating officer of the Deutsche Bank Group in Italy. In 2007 he began working with the Credit Suisse Group, where he stayed until June 2017. Positions covered during his time there include CEO of Credit Suisse Italy S.p.A and head of the Private Banking division. Carrara will retain his position as advisor for the trustee business.

